	at sea. She was possessed of a fine constitution and great nerve. About three years ago when walking with her husband in Bergen she received a blow in the right breast, by accident, from a man who was passing by. It gave her pain at the time, but she took no special unice of it. After some months, she felt a hard lump
-	in the same breast, which gave her pain. Her medical attendant in Bergen advised her to •	have it extirpated. Analysis not to undergothe operation show at Wellinistianic and con-
-	suited one of the first and deal men there, who also advised its removal. The returned to Bergen and submitted to the operation; after which, she rose from the table and walked to
٠.	her bed-room. About five months after this she took cold by sitting on damp grass, and ٠,	from this she dates her present illness, which, day by day, gained ground on her. She was under the care of a surgeon in North Shields, who, after treating her for some time, without • :	much relief, ordered her to try the effects of a warm climits. She was carrying out his direc- tions when we fell in with her, and now nothing •	remains but to speak of her short sojourn with a Her own steward remained with her here.
	a min whose faithfulness, attention, and stud-
:	doctor, and passengers all did what lay in their power. For the first week we were sanguing our efforts would be blessed, and so were able during the day after her coming on board to signal to her bushand, who still kept in sight, though gradually falling off to leeward, that she ÷ 	was somewhat improved; but at the end of the [ : - _.	first week she got a bad change, and though she somewhat rallied, yet so as not to please the doctor, and slowly but surely travelled chwards to that doom which awaits all. At first she was not happy almost dying, but as day after · ·	day pussed on, and under the kind attention of our worthy friend. Mr. PRINCE, of Adelaide.
	she was led to trust in () brist, and at lest to ask .*	Him to take her from this body of sin and sor- row. About a week before her death she asked ; ; :	Mr. Prince to administer the Sacrament, which she received with much humbleness and gratifude. By Sunday evening, September 1st. she got decidedly worse—Monday and Tuesday still worse. The evening of the last, at 7.15. She breathed her last. A gloom more easily felt than described was cast over our ship, but with it a spirit of deep thankfulness for that we were able to administer some consolation and comfort in her last hours, and perhaps · .	and comfort in her last hodes, and perhaps apare her from a doubt of agony, which seemed at first impending. Next morning she was
٠.	boried her coffee being filled with sund to sink it. The funeral service was read by Mr.
	Prince; all on board joining to pay her this last, though soloun token to respect. The following Sabbath evening Mr. Phincs' preached a most impressive funeral serm in thus closing a scene which one may travel many times o'er the deep without meeting with a similar. Mrs.
	OPDARL'S Steward continues his journey with us to Adeluide, from thence by mail to Hong-
